OPINION AND COMMENT

COME TO THE GREAT PATRIOTIC RALLY!!!

As the "Review" goes to press President Graham is issuing the following highly important statement to the press and people of North Carolina. To you, fellow alumni, it is a special call to be present and participate in a great patriotic meeting. Alma Mater calls every one of her sons not at Oglethorpe or elsewhere in the Federal service to join her in this, her expression of loyalty to the nation in its hour of supreme crisis.

"In response to urgent invitations extended to the Secretary of War and to the Secretary of the Navy to visit North Carolina on the occasion of the commencement of the University, we have the acceptance of each of these great officials of the government, and assurances that they will be present and speak in Memorial Hall of the University, June sixth, at eleven A. M.

"Few men in the world have responsibilities at this moment so great as these two men. Their coming to the State now is an event of unusual importance, and we trust that it may be made memorable by a great patriotic celebration, testifying our confidence in the administration of our government and our complete and enthusiastic loyalty to the supreme cause in which our country is engaged. We therefore invite the people of this State and section to come to the University and join in a worthy tribute of welcome to Secretary Baker and to Secretary Daniels.

"Should either or both of them be prevented from coming by any circumstance, immediate notice will be telegraphed to the papers."

The departure on May eighth of about one hundred and twenty-five of the students for three months of intensive military training at Fort Oglethorpe is the most important event of the current college month. Thoughts of the war, and efforts to adjust the University to the new situation created by the great fact of our participation in it, have, in spite of all desire to keep our normal business going on as usual, chiefly absorbed the attention of students and faculty alike. Our books have been in our hands, and we have answered "present" at our tasks: but our eyes have been looking over the rim of the college year and across the college walls to the struggling world outside. Not that we have been merely dreaming. We have been as intelligently busy as we know how to be in organizing and preparing every University resource to be instantly and fully ready whenever and for whatever service the government should call. These activities have been previously outlined. They will be steadily pressed and enlarged as conditions suggest. The splendid and spontaneous response of Carolina men everywhere to the country's call thrills the heart of the college with a deep and assured faith in the nation, and a passionate thankfulness that they are indeed and truly her sons.

A large proportion of the University students who have gone to Fort Oglethorpe are members of the senior class. They are awarded their degrees just as if they had stayed through till June sixth. Some specially qualified underclassmen also went.

SENIORS RECEIVE THEIR DEGREES

If their class room work was satisfactory up to May first, they were given credit as if the term had been completed. Military drill by the eight University companies has gone on each afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 P. M. on the athletic field. The local authorities have been assisted in the work by Captain H. H. Broadhurst, U. S. A., who was detailed by the government to come over once a week, and by Lieutenant L. P. McLendon of the National Guard, and by Sergeant Donnelly. With the opening of the 1917-18 session, it is expected that a Reserve Officers' Training Corps will be definitely established here. In addition to the undergraduates who have gone to Fort Oglethorpe, a large number of the young alumni have enlisted here. No figures are yet available; but from applications received at the college office, it appears that the number will go to at least two hundred.

No changes have been made in the approaching commencement, except that the dances and other social features that follow the regular exercises have been cut out. THE REVIEW had no strong feeling for eliminating the dances. We believe in taking our war medicine seriously; but we do not believe in taking it solemnly. However, on the whole, we incline to the belief that the students acted with a true sense of propriety in deciding to omit the dances. As for the remainder of the programme, we are glad to know that it will go forward as usual, and that the indications are for a larger number of returning alumni than at any time during recent years. This is precisely as it should be. The University was never so dear to the alumni as it is now; it was never so much in their thoughts; it never so much needed their informed advice and other help; it never had a finer outlook for service. The years following the war are to be beyond all question the greatest and most fruitful years in the history of higher education in this country. We are ready to serve the country now in the moment of its war-time need; we need even more to prepare for the great period of peace to follow.

So come back! Come back for Tuesday, June fifth, for your class re-union. We want to see you, and we want you to see us. If your class doesn't have a re-union, come back for the alumni conference and the alumni luncheon. We want you to help reorganize the alumni association, and to help get that body in working shape for the great work ahead.

For your own comfort, there are certain details to which you should give early attention. Do not fail to send your check to E. R. Rankin for your tickets for the luncheon. They are $1.00 each, and failure to secure one before your return may possibly inconvenience you in getting to the luncheon promptly. Reservations will be filled in the order requests are received, and if it is desired seats can be reserved for groups. But Mr. Rankin, the Secretary, must know beforehand.

And don't fail to make reservations for the ladies who will be with you; for they are invited and will be most cordially welcomed.

University students in large numbers have gladly responded to such national service as the country seemed to require, without regard to their personal plans and ambitions. Their going and the manner of their going is a matter of deep pride to their Alma Mater. She knew that they would do precisely as they have done but she rejoices none the less that her faith is so abundantly justified.

One unescapable result necessarily follows: their going greatly weakens her at least temporarily. The importance of keeping the college plant going at full speed, the importance of not being diverted from the recent rapid strides of progress, is tremendous. It is primarily important to the college now and to the country that the stream of college-trained men is kept at full strength, and that the college organization is kept at full strength. The situation presents a splendid opportunity for alumni who have no national service to render directly at present. They can render this essential service to the University and to the State and to the country; they can see that the young men in their immediate neighborhood have the opportunity to go to the University, and see that the opportunities of University education are made clear. Will not each alumnus who reads this note make a special and extraordinary effort this year to do this, make it a point of practical, personal pride to see to it that at least one boy goes through his influence? Organize a group of working alumni in your county to see that the county is thoroughly covered. Get the names of prospective students from your county, and see them personally now before they make other plans. See that no present student of the University drops out for lack of means to continue his work. If he is a boy of good character, you run no risk in lending him money. Don't throw this aside, or leave it to some one else to do. Do something about it yourself now. The University hasn't one-third as many scholarships at its disposal as it can place advantageously with worthy boys this summer. Sixty dollars would give some boy the opportunity of a scholarship for one year.

Within the next six months hundreds of alumni will be away from their present addresses through their connection with Training Camps, the National Guard, the Army, the Navy, and other branches of the Federal service. In all such cases the University wishes the new address. This is extremely important as in no other way can it maintain touch with the alumni and make an accurate record of the part they take in the great world conflict.

If there is any one particular in which the REVIEW feels that it has failed more signally than in any other in the task assigned it to make itself interesting to its readers, it is that of securing letters from the alumni. It has exhausted its resources in this direction without avail.

But in this hour of supreme crisis we trust there may be a change of fortune. Heretofore the alumni attitude has been that there has been nothing of interest to write about. But the war situation is teeming with interest and the REVIEW expects a steady supply of letters from the training camps, the ambulance corps, the air squadrons, etc., etc. And with the letters there should be pictures representing every phase of the service in which alumni are engaged.

Don't let this opportunity pass. It will give an interest to this publication which nothing else in the world can give it. Who will be first, please?

From a recent Tar Heel we clip the following excellent statement of the realization of duty which has been borne in upon the consciousness of every University student who has seen his comrades march away to camp but who has been left behind to continue his work here:

"Perhaps it is harder to stay than to go. Certainly it is for many men. Yet the call to the campus is as clear and insistent as the call to the camp.

"To the war-inflamed minds of almost all of us, it now seems useless and almost farcical to study and go on classes. 'How stale, and unprofitable' to us are all the uses of history, economics, science, English and other lifeless routine class-work.

"Yet now as never before it is the duty of the college student to breathe life into the lifeless work, to make his knowledge of economics, history, science, and so forth so accurate, deep, clear and alive that he can use it to serve most efficiently his community and his country. Not the man in the trenches or in the machine-shop or on the farm, but the college student,—the college student pre-eminently has both the leisure and the environment best suited to enable him in the future to sense and solve the problems of his nation and of the whole world.

"Those who stay in college now and fail to do the best work they can are the mental cowards and slackers, the intellectual deserters of their country."

EXCHANGE LECTURES

During the week beginning April 23, the lectures on the Southern University Exchange Foundation were delivered here by Professor Herbert Cushing Tolman, S. T. D., Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Vanderbilt University. In his first lecture, given in Gerrard Hall on Monday evening, when he was happily introduced by Professor Bernard, Dr. Tolman spoke on "The Achievement of Life," and analyzed the principal laws underlying education, development, and progress. This lecture, as well as his Chapel Talk on "Faith" to the students Wednesday morning, was strongly religious in tone—a reminder that Dr. Tolman is a minister of the Episcopal Church, and for three summers past has occupied the pulpit of Old Trinity Church in Wall Street, New York. A highly technical paper was read by Dr. Tolman before the Philological Club, on Tuesday evening, in which were considered "The Recently Discovered Turfan Inscriptions, dealing with the Crucifixion." Excellent audiences heard Dr. Tolman's two lectures, illustrated with beautiful lantern slides, appealing especially to the classical students but of genuine interest to the general public: "The Shrines of Hellas" and "The Ancient Monuments of Persia." Dr. Tolman's broad scholarship, his intimate studies of the monuments by personal tours in Greece and Persia, and his genial simplicity and charm of presentation all combined to make these lectures rarely interesting and informing.

John Nolen, landscape architect from Cambridge, Mass., has recently been at the University planning the further expansion of University buildings and grounds.

CAROLINA SENDS HER SONS TO CAMP

More Than Two Hundred Carolina Students and Alumni Enroll in the Fort Oglethorpe Training Camp for Officers' Reserve Corps

"Ich kann nicht anders" declared the great leader of the Reformation. "We can not do otherwise" reiterates Woodrow Wilson.

This thought finds echo in every Carolinian's heart. It is in search of "no selfish end" that nearly 200 students of the University of North Carolina have sought admission to the Fort Oglethorpe Training Camp for officers. The searching physical examination to which all were subjected resulted in the rejection of nearly fifty applicants, some because of subnormal weight, some because of defective vision or hearing, and others for various minor ailments. The earnest desire of these men for service is reflected in their urgent pleas for acceptance in spite of physical deficiencies.

Two Hundred Go to Camp

A total of 134 have been accepted among whom are over sixty per cent of the senior class and three members of the faculty. The applications of numerous others have not yet been acted upon. A large number who are below twenty-one years of age have urged in vain that the age limit be waived. Many who are not eligible for the Officers' Reserve Corps have enlisted as privates in the regular army or in the National Guard. That this desire for military service is not merely the contagious enthusiasm of youth but is an earnest sense of patriotic duty is shown by the fact that among the alumni as well as among the students the call to arms has met a prompt response. From every quarter of the State our former students are enrolling for the Training Camp, many of them are coming back to Chapel Hill in order that they may enroll from their Alma Mater.

Dr. Pratt Receives Commission

Dr. J. H. Pratt has received his commission as Major of Engineers and will command the battalion which he has organized. Captain Myers, an alumnus of the University, will command the Greensboro company. At the present writing Dr. Pratt is in Washington representing this State in a National Defense Conference. This conference, called by the Secretary of War, "consists of one delegate from each state for the purpose of considering the relations of state and Federal activities in the prosecution of the war and the methods of organizing state and local defense committees and their co-operation with the Council of National Defense."

Faculty Favored Selective Draft

While the fate of the Chamberlain bill was still in the balance the Faculty "Resolved, that the Secretary of the Faculty be instructed to write in the name of the Faculty to our Senators and Representatives in Congress strongly urging the adoption of the principle of the selective draft for the military service of the United States."

Seniors and Others Receive Academic Credit

In anticipation of the withdrawal of many students for military service before the close of the session it has been decided that to those who may enlist in either army or navy and to those who may enroll in the Reserve Officers' Training Camp full credit for the session's work will be granted in those subjects in which at the time of such enlistment or enrollment they may have a satisfactory standing. As a corollary to this the seniors who leave under these circumstances will receive their degrees as though they had completed their full course.

University Outlines Policy

Although such credits are granted even to the underclassmen whose sense of patriotism impels them to forsake their studies for sterner duties, yet it is the strong belief of the faculty that these younger men can perform their highest service to our country by remaining in the University for the present and continuing their scholastic work. The greater maturity of mind and body and the broader educational foundation resulting from further study will so increase their capacity for service that their greater usefulness one or two years hence will easily counterbalance the value of the service they can now perform. We are entering a prolonged as well as a grave war. It is an important duty to maintain the steady supply of well trained college men who must constitute the source from which the most satisfactory subalterns are to be drawn.

Commencement to be as Usual

In full recognition of the gravity of the times the University purposes to exert every energy toward preparing her young men for military duty. But at the same time it is highly important that we should not give way to any form of martial hysteria. So far as possible the ordinary curriculum and the ordinary social life of the University will be continued. Many changes and additions that look toward equipping the students for the serious international struggle will be made. No frivolities nor trivial things may be permitted to interfere with genuine preparation for national service. But the human being who entirely eschews all the lighter things of life becomes morbid and inefficient. The soldiers in the trenches have their games, their amateur theatricals, their various amusements whenever the lulls in conflict permit. Otherwise they would go mad. In appreciation of these elements of human psychology it is purposed to have our commencement exercises as usual.

Military Instruction to be Offered

Similarly no unnecessary changes in the course of academic life for next year, nor in the plans for the Summer School and in the regular session next year. A carefully planned course of military instruction will be offered. This course will be optional, but those electing it will be required to give it the same attention and study demanded in the regular academic classes. Scholastic credit will be granted for satisfactory work. The interest already shown in this work promises that this course will be taken by a large proportion of the student body. The Faculty Committee on Military Training is engaged in outlining a series of special courses to be offered next year which will contribute toward military efficiency. As examples may be mentioned wireless telegraphy, the chemistry of munitions, military hygiene, and first aid work.

McLendon and Campbell Aid

About the middle of April the time for military drill was changed from one hour on two evenings a week to an hour and a half five afternoons in the week. It now supersedes baseball and all other athletics. Captain Broadhurst, the Commandant at the A. & E. College, has visited us for a day each week and has given us the benefit of his advice and suggestions. Lieutenant McLendon, who is well remembered on the campus as a capable student and who has acquired reputation as an attorney, as a legislator, and as an efficient officer in the National Guard, has again proved his loyalty to his Alma Mater by taking charge of the training of the battalion. A great loss was sustained when Coach T. J. Campbell left for a week's visit to his home, before going to the Reserve Officers' Camp at Plattsburg. He had organized the battalion and had established it upon a firm basis. As an athletic coach, as an organizer of our military unit, and still more as a strong man and loyal friend, we miss him. Others may carry on his work but can not fill his place.

WAYNESVILLE WINS THE AYCOCK CUP

The Victory in Fifth Annual Final Contest of High School Debating Union Goes to Vinson Smathers and Roy Francis of the Waynesville High School

The fifth annual final contest of the High School Debating Union was held at the University on Thursday and Friday, April 19th and 20th. Messrs. Vinson Smathers and Roy Francis, representing the Waynesville high school, were victorious over all others and carried away the debating trophy, the Aycock Memorial Cup. They won the decision in the final debate in Memorial Hall, upholding the affirmative side of the query, Resolved, That the Federal Government should own and operate the railways. They were opposed in the final debate by Misses Gladys Andrews and Emma Lindsay, of the Mount Olive high school, defending the negative.

Two hundred and ninety-six debaters—101 of them girls—representing 74 high schools, came from 54 counties in all sections of the State to participate in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial Cup. Debaters were present from eastern points, such as Manteo, Dare county; Sladesville, Hyde county; and Atlantic, Carteret county. From the west representatives came from Almond and Bryson City, Swain county; Glade Valley, Alleghany county; Jefferson, Ashe county; Asheville, Waynesville and other extreme points. The final contest of the Debating Union, the inter-scholastic track meet and the tennis tournament, altogether made up High School Week in the University's calendar. Fully 600 visitors came to Chapel Hill for the week. They were heartily welcomed and their stay was made enjoyable. They carried back with them to the high schools and the various communities a new knowledge of the co-operative work of the State University.

The Preliminaries

The 296 debaters who participated in the final contest had all been successful in their triangular debates on March 30th, in which series 1,324 debaters representing 331 high schools in 92 counties of the State participated.

A general meeting of debaters and teachers was held in the auditorium of the Peabody building on Thursday afternoon, April 19. Professor N. W. Walker presided over this meeting and extended a hearty welcome to the visitors. The teams on the affirmative were divided by lot into ten sections for the first preliminary Thursday night, and the teams on the negative were likewise divided into ten sections. From each of these sections one team was chosen for a second preliminary on Friday morning, April 20th. The schools which had teams making the second preliminary on the affirmative were: Waynesville, Pleasant Garden, Gatesville, Calypso, Wilmington, Benson, Mount Olive, Graham, Asheville and Mount Airy. The schools having teams in the second preliminary on the negative were: Mount Olive, Troy, Charlotte, East Bend, Wendell, Sylvan, Laurinburg, Pleasant Garden, East Durham and Waynesville. The schools having teams in the second preliminary, both affirmative and negative, were: Waynesville, Pleasant Garden and Mount Olive.

The Final Debate

The largest crowd which has ever witnessed a final high school debate at the University gathered on the occasion of this year's final debate on Friday night, April 20th, the entire assemblage numbering 2000 persons and more than filling Memorial Hall. The audience consisted of students and members of the faculty of the University, citizens of Chapel Hill, debaters, athletes, teachers, principals, superintendents and the large number of other visitors who had come from various parts of the State.

President E. K. Graham presided over the debate. Mr. R. O. Everett, of Durham, a member of the class of 1903, presented the Aycock Cup to the winning team in behalf of all the University's inter-collegiate debaters. Dean M. C. S. Noble, of the School of Education, presented the cups and medals to winners in the inter-scholastic track meet. The stage of Memorial Hall had been appropriately decorated for the occasion. The young debaters were given prolonged applause frequently throughout the debate.

President Graham commented on the growth of the High School Debating Union and spoke of the present scope and extent of its work. He declared the high school debate to be the happiest occasion which the University knows. He emphasized the value of the debating system in developing good citizenship and good sportsmanship. He referred to the schools which had in past years won the Aycock Cup, Pleasant Garden, Winston-Salem, Wilson and Graham.

The Speakers

Vinson Smathers was the first affirmative speaker for Waynesville high school. After referring to the changing social and political conditions he laid down his three propositions: That the present system of railroad ownership is wasteful in management; that it is a source of corrupting political influence; that the Interstate Commerce Commission can not correct these evils. He believed Government ownership the only solution.

The first speaker on the negative for Mount Olive was Miss Gladys Andrews. She outlined her argument opposing Government ownership, declaring that the whole scheme is undemocratic and un-American; that Government ownership is unjust from a political standpoint; that it is not the proper function of the Government; that private ownership is in accord with American principles, and that Government ownership would necessarily result in political corruption.

Roy Francis completed the affirmative argument. He insisted that Government ownership and operation is practicable. He pointed out its success where it had been tried and made clear how it would be operated for the interest of all the people. He attributed Germany's efficiency to its government owned railways.

The last speaker for Mount Olive on the negative was Miss Emma Lindsay. After reviewing the points made by her colleague she argued that Government ownership was a most unwise policy from a business standpoint. The experience that foreign nations have had with it does not warrant its adoption here, she declared.

The rejoinders on both sides were spirited and forceful. The rejoinders, as well as the main speeches, showed that the debaters had a mastery of the subject and were speakers of composure.

The decision of the judges, Messrs. H. H. Williams, L. P. McGehee, Edwin Greenlaw, H. M. Wagstaff and W. S. Bernard, stood 3 to 2 in favor of the affirmative.

Mr. R. O. Everett presented the Aycock Cup to the winning team in a fitting speech. He spoke of the value of the Debating Union both to the individual debaters and to the State as a whole. He stated that the plaudits which went to the winners of the cup were sufficient reward for those who did not win it. Dean Noble, in happy fashion, presented the cups and medals to winners in the inter-scholastic track meet. Immediately after the debate a reception was tendered all visitors in the Library. This was the closing exercise in the program of entertainment.

Community Co-operation

In carrying through to a successful conclusion the final contest praise should be given to the spirit of co-operation found everywhere. The homes of Chapel Hill entertained the 150 girls and ladies who came for the debate, members of the faculty acted as judges in the preliminaries and in the final debate, and students acted as officers in the preliminaries. They entertained the men and boys in the dormitories and co-operated heartily in giving the visitors a good time. The teachers and a number of students of the Chapel Hill graded school gave valuable help in serving at the reception and in decorating the stage of Memorial Hall. The Swain Hall management contributed in very satisfactory fashion the bill of fare at the reception. The baseball management provided complimentary tickets for the game between the Carolina Reserves and the Raleigh Highs. The Y. M. C. A. gave its building and the time and efforts of its officers to the Debating Union.

Success of the Debating Union

Since its organization in 1913, the High School Debating Union has met with a remarkable success and growth. It has grown and has carried with it beneficial results for the individual debater, his school, his community and the University.

In 1913, 360 debaters representing 90 schools in 15 counties took part in the contest. In 1914, 600 debaters participated, representing 150 schools in 64 counties. In 1915, 1000 debaters participated, representing 250 schools in 91 counties. In 1916, 1300 debaters representing 325 schools in 94 counties took part in the contest. This year 1324 debaters, representing 331 schools in 92 counties participated.

The Debating Union is a part of the University's Extension plan. It will be pushed with a still further vigor next year.

The list of schools taking part in the final contest was: Almond, Asheville, Atkinson, Atlantic, Aurora, Bain Academy, Benson, Boiling Springs, Bladenboro, Bryson City, Charlotte, Clemmons, Candler, Calypso, Columbus, Cedar Grove, Cleveland, Clyde, Columbia, Dixie, East Bend, East Spencer, Elm City, Edenton, Elise, Enfield, Franklinton, Falcon, Falling Creek, Godwin, Graham, Greenville, Grifton, Glade Valley, Gatesville, Holly Springs, Huntersville, Indian Trail, Jackson, Jamestown, Jacksonville, Jefferson, Knap of Reeds, Laurinburg, Leaksville, Lenoir, Leicester, Lillington, Lucama, Lumber Bridge, Mooresville, Mount Holly, Marshville, Mount Airy, Mount Olive, Manteo, Mars Hill,

Many alumni were present for the debate.

BASEBALL SEASON IS SUCCESSFUL

Annual Game Between Virginia and Carolina at Greensboro Won by Tar Heels 3 to 2— Review of Season

On Monday, April 24, Carolina finished up a successful baseball season in a rather bad manner, losing to Georgia 10 to 1 in a poor exhibition of base ball. Some figures worked up by the Tar Heel show that the Varsity did better this year than they have done in the past four years, and in spite of slumps played consistent base ball. The batting average is quoted below, together with the pitchers' records. The numerals in parenthesis indicate the number of games in which the players participated:

Powell 3 2 .600	Llewellyn 3 2 .600

Barnes has more home runs to his credit than any other man. In fact no one else is in his class, in spite of the inviting nearness of the left field fence.

A brief review of the season shows the details of the Varsity's edge on its opponents in runs. The opening game with Bingham was won by a close margin and bore the deserving name of a ball game. We treated Haverford and West Virginia Wesleyan worse, both contests being swatfests for the local boys, Barnes, Bennett, and Weeks each ringing up a home run. The next game with Davidson opened the contest for the State championship, and the White and Blue got off to a running start, trimming the Presbyterians 8 to 4. We were put back a notch the next game, however, when Wake Forest took a ten-frame classic from Coach Hearn's men 6 to 5. The tie was broken when Duncan scored from third on Cox's sacrifice fly.

Northern Trip

On the trip up through Virginia, Powell's benders were scarcely touched by the Washington and Lee willows, and Carolina batted Pierroti's delivery for eight hits and two runs. The Virginians were let down with three safe bingles.

On their return home, the Tar Heels found Yale waiting. The game was prevented from going into extra innings by Munson, who drove one of Coleman's straight ones over the fence, scoring himself and one of his teammates. The Elis had to shed their coats to win, and the game was pronounced to be one of the best of the season.

The following day found Wofford on the scene. The boys from the Palmetto State suffered a shutout at our hands, while we piled up three runs in a rather sleepy game, Barnes' home run being the closest thing to a feature.

Virginia Defeated 3—2

Owing to the rather sinister appearance of national affairs, only one game was played with Virginia. On the Saturday of Junior Week, Powell went on the mound for Carolina at Greensboro, and for eight innings had the Orange and Blue guessing. He was taken out in the ninth to allow a pinch hitter to wield the willow. The Virginians had a one run lead on us at the beginning of the ninth, but the score was tied in that inning when Stewart doubled and was sent across the plate when Younce, batting for Herty, smashed a single into center field. In the tenth Jennette doubled, his fourth hit of the day, and came home on Coleman's steamer to center. Coleman finished the game on the mound, and technically the victory belongs to him, but there is honor enough for both.

Southern Trip

From Greensboro our warrior band went on down south to take the measure of some of our neighbors. We took a fast game from Davidson, 1 to 0, Coleman and Lawson opposing each other in a game characterized by neat fielding and little hitting.

At Spartanburg we were entertained by Wofford, whom we trimmed to the tune of 6 to 1. The same pitchers who worked on Emerson Field. Kinlaw and Lawton, faced each other again, and the same man won.

At Atlanta we were treated badly by the Crackers who took one game from Llewellyn 8 to 2, and the second from Powell, 4 to 2. In neither could the Tar Heels find Parks or Westbrook for enough hits to win, and the home team had everything their own way.

On our way back we stopped at Columbia long enough to take a very one-sided contest from South Carolina. Coleman and Folger had a picnic with the stick, while almost every Tar Heel got at least two hits. One ball Folger knocked over the fence never has been found.

The last two games of the season were played with Georgia. We took the first, Powell pitching, 5 to 0, completely outclassing the visitors. The changeableness of baseball was shown the next day, however, when we lost the worst played game of the year 10 to 1.

E. K. BENNETT ELECTED CAPTAIN

The well and favorably known "Wop" Bennett has been elected to pilot the Carolina nine for 1917-18. Bennett is one of the best catchers in college baseball and a glance at his healthy average speaks convincingly of his success with the stick. "Wop" is a sure, steady player who suffers no slumps. He's right there in the pinches and on his toes from the time he first buckles his shin guards until the last ball whizzes over in the ninth.—Tar Heel.

TO MEMBERS OF THE CLASS OF 1897:

The reunion committee of the class of 1897 has issued through A. T. Allen, chairman, of Salisbury, a letter to all members of the class with reference to the big 20-year reunion which this class will hold at the approaching commencement. This letter follows:

To the Fellow Members of the Class of 1897:

We, the undersigned, have been appointed by the Central Alumni Committee at Chapel Hill for the purpose of preparing for the reunion of the class of 1897, its twentieth anniversary.

This reunion is to be held at Chapel Hill on June 5th and after considerable correspondence we have come to the conclusion to undertake the three following things:

FIRST: During the twenty minutes which we have at our disposal in Gerrard Hall on June 5th, to ask D. B. Smith to speak for ten minutes; some of the others to make short talks; and for some one to read a short account of our fellow members who have passed away. Nobody, who has anything to say, will be denied the privilege, save as the time at our disposal denies him.

SECOND: Following the example set by a number of classes we thought it wise to try to make as large a contribution as possible to the Alumni Loyalty Fund. Every member of the class is strongly urged to contribute a small amount or any amount that he may feel disposed to give to this fund before the 5th of June. Mr. E. R. Rankin at Chapel Hill will receive this contribution and credit it to our class or, if you prefer, any member of this committee will receive the funds and forward them to Chapel Hill. Would it not be possible for us to add five hundred ($500) or a thousand dollars ($1,000) to this fund?

THIRD: We are planning to hold a supper or a smoker on the evening of June 5th at some hotel in Chapel Hill and at this meeting everybody will have a chance to dispense with his pent eloquence.

Please write to some member of the committee and notify him whether you can attend or whether you will join with us in contributing to this Alumni Fund.

Come to Chapel Hill and let us celebrate old times for a day!

THE UNIVERSITY IN LETTERS

Despite the fact that it appears at a time when all men's minds are occupied by thoughts of the crisis that confronts America, the April issue of Studies in Philology is attracting wide attention among scholars because of its unique character and the high quality of the material which it contains. One well-known scholar has written that in his opinion it is the greatest number that has ever appeared in an American university series. Other illustrations might be given to show that the high expectations aroused by the preliminary announcements are thoroughly substantiated now that the completed book is in our hands. What is more to the point is the fact that the attractive little circular sent out by the editor a few weeks ago has already borne fruit in the shape of a considerable amount of money, so that up to the present writing about one-third of the total cost of this issue has been met by voluntary contributions by men not in any way connected with the University. More money will certainly be received from these sources within the next few weeks, and it is also hoped that Carolina men, recognizing the great value of this work as a means of increasing the prestige of the University throughout the world of scholarship, will see the necessity of still further relieving the pressure upon the limited resources of the journal.

This is not the place for an extended review of the contents of this volume of nearly two hundred pages, but some idea of the book can be given in a few words. In his Foreword, the editor, Professor Greenlaw, calls attention to the fact that these ten essays, dealing with a single great period in English thought and letters, form a concrete example of collaborative scholarship which gives "a totality of effect that would have been impossible had they appeared in a number of periodicals scattered through a dozen months." He cites as illustration of the principle that inspired the genesis and the working out of the volume, the results gained by collaboration in the fields of science, history, and medical research. The point of view is well stated in his concluding paragraph:

"That radical changes in American education are at hand is beyond question. To think that the issue lies between compulsory Greek and compulsory vocational training is to start another profitless controversy between the Ancients and the Moderns and to fall into the blindest of errors. But that advanced scholarship, in whatever field, must emerge from its isolation and through both individual and co-operative effort contribute not alone to learned journals for initiates in the mystery but also to the life of our common humanity is as certain as that America must prepare to take her part in world affairs. In the new age now dawning in America, impulses that enriched the renaissance may once more become active. To foster such impulses is a duty of scholarship now as it was in the humanistic revival of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries."

Thus, the volume is unique not only in the fact that never before in the history of American philological scholarship has a single issue of a learned journal contained contributions from so many scholars of the highest distinction in a special field but also in its illustration of an idea of collaboration in this field of research that is capable of further and even more fruitful development. The first part of the book is devoted to the Elizabethan Drama. Mr. W. J. Lawrence, of Dublin, who is widely known for his studies of the Elizabethan theatre, makes his first American contribution in an interesting article about a young Irishman who came to London when Shakespeare, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher were at the height of their powers, and wrote a lively comedy of manners which held the stage for a generation. Professor Adams, of Cornell, contributes a paper on the famous Blackfriars, with three illustrations, and Professor Graves, of Trinity, makes further contributions to our knowledge of the presentation of plays in the Elizabethan period. This section of the volume is completed by a paper on Hamlet by Professor Tucker Brooke, of Yale, and by one on Shakespeare's methods of composition by Professor Manly, the distinguished head of the department of English at the University of Chicago.

The second section of the volume is devoted to essays on English poetry from Spenser to Milton, this series being introduced by a lengthy and informing study of certain aspects of Elizabethan poetic style by Professor Alden of Leland Stanford. Professor Alden has recently published a monumental edition of Shakespeare's Sonnets, and the present essay is in a sense a by-product of his work in preparation of that volume. Professor Fletcher, of Columbia, widely known for his work on Spenser and on Dante, has a charming Spenser essay on "The Painter of Poets," which even non-specialists may read with pleasure. Professor Osgood, of Princeton, editor of the Concordance to Spenser, recently published by the Carnegie Institution, has an essay on Spenser's indebtedness to Biblical literature of wisdom which opens up a new source of renaissance thought. Our own University is represented by Professor Hanford's interesting study of the dramatic element in Paradise Lost and by Professor Greenlaw's study of Milton's philosophical idealism, a paper which will increase his wide reputation as an Elizabethan scholar. At the end of the volume is a valuable bibliography, classified and with annotations, of recent literature dealing with this field, about one hundred books and monographs being included in this record of a year's activities.

The book about birds, which we have all been in search of for years, at last comes from the press of a firm principally manned by North Carolinians and from the pen of a North Carolinian. This is "The Bird Study Book," by T. Gilbert Pearson (1899), Secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies. Mr. Pearson has done extraordinarily effective work, and today is virtual head of the Audubon societies in the United States. A prolific writer, with a deep interest in his subject, he accomplishes a great deal through the magazine articles, frequently happily illustrated, which appear in such magazines as The Craftsman, Country Life in America, and The Art World. The present volume (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York, 1917), some two hundred and fifty pages long, is excellently and fully illustrated with drawings, photographs, and a colored frontispiece. Mr. Pearson is a close observer of the life of birds in their haunts, and has studied them in all parts of the United States and contiguous territory. The chapter headings are indicative of this personal interest: "First Acquaintance with the Birds," "The Life About the Nest," "Domestic Life of the Birds," "The Migration of Birds," "The Birds in Winter," "The Economic Value of Birds," "Civilization's Effect on the Bird Supply," "The Traffic in Feathers," "Bird Protection Laws and Their Enforcement—How Laws are Made," "Bird Reservations," "Making Bird Sanctuaries," and "Teaching Bird Study." This interesting and long-needed book, as stated by the author, "has been written for the consideration of that ever-increasing class of Americans who are interested in acquiring a greater familiarity with the habits and activities of wild birds."

There was organized in Greensboro on Saturday, April 13th, the Association of Mathematics Teachers (Western North Carolina). W. W. Rankin, Jr., of the University of North Carolina, was elected president; J. W. Moore, of the Winston-Salem high school, first vice-president; Miss Fannie Starr Mitchell, of the Raleigh high school, second vice-president; L. R. Johnston, of Oak Ridge Institute, third vice-president; J. W. Lasley, Jr., of the University of North Carolina, secretary and treasurer.

It is the purpose of the Association to follow this meeting with a meeting at Chapel Hill during the summer school.

In the near future the Bureau of Extension will publish a full account of the proceedings of the Greensboro conference. These can then be had without charge from the secretary of the Association: J. W. Lasley, Jr., Box 574, Chapel Hill, N. C.

The Community Festival this year held at the new amphitheatre in Battle's Park, was one of the best events of its kind ever witnessed in Chapel Hill. The program of Thursday, May 3rd, which was attended by the Federation of Women's Clubs, consisted of two one-act plays written by students in the University, followed by May games and dances by children of the Chapel Hill graded school. All elements that make up the Chapel Hill community took part in the exercises.

Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" was given on Saturday afternoon with a carefully selected cast, which was coached by Professors McKie and Dargan. Special costumes helped to give a real Elizabethan flavor to this production. The cast follows: Orsino, Cecil Rymer; Sebastian, Robert deRosset; Antonio, O. W. Hale; a sea captain, Prof. George McKie; Valentine, Mr. Macmillan; Sir Toby, Hubert Smith; Sir Andrew, Buck Wimberley; Malvolio, Sam Fisher; Fabian, T. L. Pace; Feste, Avon Blue; priest, Mr. McKie; officer, Mr. Dargan; Oliver, Miss Gladys Avery; Maria, Mrs. N. Foerster; Viola, Miss Eleanor Wilson.

Yours very truly,

Provides a way for every man who wants to strengthen the University and perpetuate its spirit; makes it possible for a man to live on through its good work, and to put back into the world a fair return on what he got out of it through an institution that helped him when he most needed help.

Two Ways to do this Big Business: (1) Through an annual subscription.
(2) Through a bequest in your will.

The size of the subscription, or of the bequest, is important, of course; but the main thing is to have a part in it: The fund in which every alumnus has a share.

Money for Education

Many young men and women secure money for their education through life insurance. President Garfield was a notable example. All through his conspicuous career he paid frequent and high tribute to the New York Life Policy on which he borrowed money that put him through college and started him on the road to success. New York Life policies in addition to the usual provisions, provide free insurance and a life income in advent of disability by accident or disease; double indemnity for fatal travel accidents.

HER PARTNER SAVED THE DANCER

"If only it was not so hot," sighed the pretty girl as she tried to manipulate her handkerchief so as to absorb the perspiration without rubbing the powder off her nose. "If only it was not so hot the dancing would be lovely. But I feel like a rag and look like a beet."

"You look—you look," hesitated the youth, trying to summon courage and poetic fancy at the same time, "like a dewy rose to me." Then embarrassed at his gallant attempt, he hurried on with: "But I'll soon make you feel as fresh and sweet as you look, for that big punch bowl is full of the finest drink you ever tasted."

"My, you certainly think a lot of it," said the girl rather condescendingly. "Are you sure it's all right for me to drink? What is the name of this wonderful elixir?"

"Of course it's all right for you to drink it. Mother gives it to the children to keep them well during this warm weather, and they served it at the church social the other night; but I shall not tell you the name, not until after you have tasted it."

"Well, what do you think of it?" the young man asked a couple of minutes later.

"It's wonderful! It tastes so good, and I'm beginning to feel like dancing all night. Please tell me the name of it right away, please, and I'll give you the next dance."

"That's a bargain. It's Pepsi-Cola, the heat killer!"
